Combs, Two Newspapers Are Scored

PAINTSVILLE, Ky. (AP)—A person listening to the campaign speeches of A. B. Chandler might wonder who he is running against for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The former governor continues to use most of his campaign ammunition on Gov. Bert Combs and a couple of Louisville newspaper-men, with seldom any reference to Edward T. Breathitt Jr., the man opposing him in the May 28 primary.

Chandler, who was to speak here this morning and at Sandy Hook tonight, made editorial writer John Ed Pearce and cartoonist Hugh Haynie, both of the Courier-Journal, his chief targets in a speech at Frenchburg Friday.

Chandler accused them of being more concerned with selfish political interests than with doing newspaper work.

He charged that Pearce writes speeches for Governor Combs, then pretends the speeches in newspaper editorials.

As for Haynie, Chandler said he has heard that Haynie lampooned him in a coloring book, which will soon be circulated by Breathitt supporters. Chandler said Haynie portrayed him as a "clown or a pussy cat" in the book.

"I have this to say," Chandler declared, "when they tie into Albert Benjamin Chandler, they're talking about the toughest honest in all of Kentucky's history, and I'm not afraid of any of them separately or collectively."

Chandler commented on the resignation of Ralph Maurer as supervisor of administrative and information services for the state Department of Mental Health. Chandler said Maurer quit because "he told the truth and the truth is one thing Combs and his crowd don't want."

Her theater work includes lead roles in such productions as H. M. S. Pinafore, Maytime, and Hansel and Gretel.

Since coming to Murray Mrs. Caldwell has been active in many phases of vocal music, being a member of the First Methodist Church choir and the Woman's Club Chorus.

Top Three Essays In Library Essay Contest Bring Books To Winners; Essays Are Printed

Two essay contests sponsored by the PTA's of the city and county for the Murray Calloway County Library brought over 300 entries. The top three essays are being printed below for the interest of the many people in the city and county who are concerned about the local library.

Prizes awarded were books. Ronald Swann won the first prize. Rita Brandon second prize and Michael Boyd the third prize. Following are the essays.

What The Bookmobile Means To Me

The original bookmobile in Kentucky started from a very small beginning after 1946. By 1952, ten mobile libraries were rolling in Kentucky. In the beginning this was made possible by donations, solicitations of books, and funds. Many publishers, also, donated books. The original idea was to carry books to rural areas where books were extremely scarce. Now bookmobiles receive funds from the state and books are carried to all parts of the state. The bookmobile affords us, at Lynn Grove, a greater opportunity to expand our literary knowledge. We get a greater variety of books than our school budget would allow. Books are exchanged for different ones every few weeks so that we can

Seen & Heard Around MURRAY

Large plants mean a lot to a town in many obvious ways, but they help in a number of ways that are often overlooked.

For instance we needed some safety goggles for the shop. A call to Chuck Miller, Safety Director for the stove plant produced the desired results in no time at all.

Chuck even went to the trouble of bringing them by the office and showing us two different styles and recommended the style that would give us the most protection for our particular operation.

We could have ordered them from somewhere or other, not knowing exactly what we would get, but this was much nicer.

Chuck did us a big favor and increased our already high esteem of the personnel of the stove plant.

Which brings to mind the idea we read the other day that to make friends, you have to be one.

Paul Shahan and Mrs. Lillian Lowry have done a wonderful job on "The Stubblefield Story" according to those who are close to the production. Mr. Shahan wrote the music and Mrs. Lowry the lyrics or libretto.

This is creative work at its best and just takes pure talent and ability.

Murray is fortunate in having folks like this right here.

The Rotary Club will be around next week on Thursday about 9:00 selling tickets to the production. It is something the entire family can attend.

The Stubblefield Story is about Nathan Stubblefield, the inventor of radio.

A native of Murray, a genius who lived before his time. This will be an opportunity to get some local history in a pleasing manner.

Notice what a tough time the Minors trees had this past winter. Most of the ones we have seen have been frozen back from one third to one half.

They have all put out though somewhere along the trunk.

Juan Pizarro, Pascual And Regan Alike

By United Press International
Juan Pizarro, Camilo Pascual and Phil Regan came up with three of a kind, a hand that doesn't always win in poker, but one which couldn't be beaten in the American League Friday night.

Each one of them turned in a three-hit shutout, with Pizarro and Regan adding kickers by connecting for their first AL homers.

Pizarro kept the Chicago White Sox in first place with a 2-0 victory over the Los Angeles Angels, Pascual blanked the Kansas City A's by the same score to post his fourth win for the Minnesota Twins and Regan led the Detroit Tigers to a 14-0 runaway over the Cleveland Indians.

Pizarro did practically all the work for the White Sox, driving in both their runs with a single in addition to his third-inning homer. He struck off loser Ken McBride. He struck out six in ending his second victory without a loss.

Pascual also fanned six in out-pitching Orlando Pena, who pitched the only runs of the contest in the second inning when Minnesota's rookie Jay Ward belted a two-run double for his first major league hit.

Regan, now 3-1, never had it so easy as the Tigers topped out loser Gary Bell and Jerry Walker for 11 of their runs in the first four innings. Regan struck out seven and personally knocked out Bell with his homer in the fourth.

Dick McAuliffe drove in six runs for Detroit, four with a grand slam homer in the third inning.

The Baltimore Orioles downed the New York Yankees 3-0 and the Boston Red Sox defeated the Washington Senators by the same score in other AL games.

In the National League, the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the San Francisco Giants 2-1, the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 1-0, the New York Mets made it five in a row with a 3-2 win over the Cincinnati Reds, the Houston Astros beat the Chicago Cubs 4-1 and the Milwaukee Braves defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 4-1 in a game limited to 6½ innings by rain.

Apartito, Smith Homer
Luis Aparito and Al Smith each homered for the Orioles, who broke a 3-all tie with the Yankees by scoring three runs in the eighth inning. Jackie Brandt's double off loser Hal Reniff drove in the tie-breaking run and John Orsino singled home two more. Reliever Dick Hall was the winner.

Frank Malone singled in the sixth inning to tie the score at 2-2. He rapped a two-run double in the eighth to break the deadlock between the Red Sox and Senators. Malone, who collected three of Boston's five hits, bunched his game-winning double off reliever Ronnie Kune. But Tom Cheney, now 4-2, was the loser.

Jack Lannabe was the winning pitcher in relief of Ike Delock. Dick Stuart hit his fourth homer of the year with one on for the Red Sox and Larry Osborne belted his sixth longer for the Senators.

Lost Time Doesn't Hurt Now Since Willey Has A Chance To Pitch Regularly With Mets

By United Press International
The last years aren't so painful for Carlton Willey any more because the New York Mets are giving him all he ever asked for — a chance to pitch.

That chance has resulted in the 31-year old Cherryfield, Maine, right-hander's return to the form that made him one of the most promising pitchers in the National League as a member of the Milwaukee Braves in 1958.

It also has contributed to the emergence of the Mets, a team that lost a record 120 games in 1962, as a major surprise of 1963. The Mets set a club record of five consecutive victories Friday night when they shaded the Cincinnati Reds 3-2 on the strength of Willey's five-hit pitching and an eight-inning homer by Jim Hickman.

Willey won eight games during a two-month stretch to help the Braves to the 1958 NL pennant but then fell victim to the rigid pitching rotation system that also cost the Milwaukee club Joey Jay and Juan Pizarro. He languished on the bench for four long years until finally this spring the Mets acquired him from the Braves.

Two Runs Unearned
Willey, who yielded two unearned runs Friday night when Johnny Edwards homered after an error by Don Drysdale, a 25-game winner in 1962, squared his 1963 record at 3-3 with a six-hit, 11-strikeout performance against the Giants, who had won nine of their previous 10 games. Tommy Davis doubled home the decisive run for the Dodgers as San Francisco's Jack Sanford suffered his second loss against five victories.

Strikes Out 13
Dick Farrell struck out 13 batters and allowed only two hits in winning his third game for the Colts. Farrell pitched perfect ball in eight innings — except in the seventh when a single by Lou Brock and Billy Williams' triple produced Chicago's run.

George Altman homered with two out in the ninth inning to give Curt Simmons and the Cardinals the verdict over Bob Friend and the Pirates. Simmons yielded nine hits but no walks in scoring his fifth straight win and second shutout of the season.

Home runs by Denis Menke and Roy McMillan and Denny Lemaster's three-hit pitching enabled the Braves to beat the Phillies in a game ended after 6½ innings by rain. Chris Short suffered his fourth straight loss for the Phillies.

April 27's "Wide World of Sports" turned out to be quite a success for the Murray teams. Coach Johnny Reagan's baseball team won its 16th straight game and 30th of the season to mark the first time in many years, if not the first time in the history of the school, a Racetrack team has accomplished this feat.

Mickey Martin, the freshman right-hander from Evansville, had quite a day. He limited Lamouth to two hits and didn't let a runner get past second en route to 7-0 shut-out. In addition to picking up his fourth win without a loss, Martin went two-for-three at bat, collecting a single and a double, and drove in three runs.

Local Boys Enjoy Explorer Conference At Fort Knox

The Region Four Explorers Delegation Conference was held May 2-4 at Fort Knox, Ky. This was a meeting of the delegates from each council in Kentucky, West Virginia and Ohio. The purpose of this meeting was to discuss points with other teenagers, hear speeches and take this information back to other Explorers at home. Approximately 350 Explorers represented the 19,494 Explorer of Region Four.

The theme of this year's conference was "Citizenship". The viewpoint of Youth is also a topic of discussion at the conference. The viewpoint of Youth is a document that was drawn up at the National Explorer Conference last August. It deals with points about citizenship, school and daily living. Three of the most interesting points were:

A. To learn more about Communism and other subversive organizations so we can bury our enemies with the truth about freedom.

B. Conduct activities that increase our understanding of the principles set forth in the United States Declaration of Independence, Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

C. Seek greater recognition of youth's abilities and achievements that stand in overwhelming contrast to its delinquency.

This last point was of special interest because many teenagers who do good things are overlooked because of the bad publicity that teenagers get who do wrong things.

There were many speeches during the conference.

Stewart Outman of the United States Department of State and a former ambassador to Thailand, spoke on "Building a Better America." There was a question and answer period after his speech.

Wayne Embury and Jack Tymann, who are professional basketball players for the Cincinnati Royals spoke on Citizenship Through Personal Fitness and My Brothers Keeper. There was a question and answer period after these speeches.

Duane Carter who has been racing in the Indianapolis 500 for ten years spoke on "Citizenship Behind the Wheel." This was very appropriate since many teenagers have recently or will soon get their driver's license. His three main points were that courtesy, attitude and maintenance of the vehicle are the most important factors in safe driving.

The Delegates from the Four Rivers Council were Stanley Jewell, Dale Sykes, Otis Jones and Tommy Williams of Murray, Glen Exum and Ken Morgan of Fulton; Jimmy Goforth and Louis Wise of Paducah; Glen Exum, Dale Sykes

Activities are planned and carried out by the members themselves in the six basic areas of exploration: Vocational, Social, Outdoor, Community Service, Citizenship and Personal Fitness. All boys in the 8th grade who are 14 years old are welcome to come to the meetings and take part in the activities.

The above article was written by Otis Jones who was the Delegation Correspondent for this trip. I believe this will give you an idea of the quality of boys we have in this Exploring program and why I as an Advisor have such confidence in our Youth of today.

One fact makes the design for happiness a succession of accidents that give her good reason to feel for her life. Two of her guardians and trustees, Abraham Allen and Roger Clayton, have tried to make her life a series of accidents. The third, Roger Clayton, has arranged a marriage for her with a man who is a former Mapleville boy, to investigate Trevor, whose father, Mr. Clayton, is in a state of confusion. Gillian, who was the first to be engaged to Roger Clayton, has now been engaged to Abraham Allen. This has caused a great deal of confusion and has led to a series of events that will change the lives of all three.

JIM TREVOR was determined to examine every foot of the abandoned warehouse where Jill Bellamy had been trapped. He looked at the tools he had collected: screwdriver, chisel, crowbar. He added a flashlight and glanced at his watch. Only eleven o'clock. He'd wait at least another two hours.

He went back to his desk to write a report. The accident, he related, were authentic. They had obviously been engineered. That meant someone wanted to eliminate Gillian Bellamy. Because they had come in quick succession, it seemed apparent that someone was in a hurry that something must happen to the Bellamy girl before she was twenty-one.

The people who would profit by her death were William Bennett, Abraham Allen and Roger Clayton. Clayton had been in New York at the time of the first three accidents. This appeared to remove him as a suspect. But did it? After all, it might be an attempt to establish an alibi. The man who had engineered the attacks on Miss Bellamy need not have been on the scene. This fellow John Jones could be, and probably was, the active agent.

Jim suggested that the law firm check in New York on the financial standing of all three men. Then he sat tapping his pen on the table, frowning. Roger Clayton was not the only governor with an alibi. At the time when someone had hurled rocks at Gillian Bellamy, William Bennett and Abraham Allen had been together. Or had they? This was something else to check on.

Abraham Allen, Honest Abe, for a moment Jim Trevor's good-looking face lost its easy going quality, grew hard as granite. So far, he had not laid eyes on Honest Abe, but he intended to do so. It was Abe

Allen to whom his father had written, expressing his desire to make full restitution of the money his former neighbors had lost through their investments in oil. It was Abe Allen who had replied tartly that the people of Mapleville wanted no further dealings with Andrew Trevor.

But Abraham Allen had never told the people of Mapleville about Trevor's offer. In the interview he had had with Mrs. Meam, his father's old housekeeper, while he waited in vain for John Jones to return, Jim had discovered the truth.

Honest Abe indeed! Sooner or later, Jim intended to settle his father's score with Abraham Allen and force Allen to admit publicly that Andrew Trevor was willing to make full restitution of the money that had been lost because of the trust his friends and neighbors had in him.

Jim finished his report and saw that few lights showed in the village. Time for him to be on his way.

JIM SAT in the long grass and looked at the warehouse. He had overlooked the one thing he most needed—his binoculars.

A big torch moved around inside the warehouse. Now and then, from its position, he realized that the torch was resting on the floor. Several times a dark shadow moved in front of it but it was impossible to recognize the dim figure. So far as he could make out, the shadow was stooping, lifting something.

Then the light swung in a big arc and went out. The intruder was out of doors now. At intervals there was a heavy thud and a rattle. Then a sound he could not mistake—the slam of a car door. A motor throbbed into life, lights were switched on. He lay flat as the car backed and turned, the lights sweeping over the long grass and weeds. Then they were gone and he leaped to his feet. A small pick-up truck was moving rapidly toward the village.

He hesitated, torn between two courses of action. He could try to follow the truck on foot and get the license number, or he could follow his original plan and search the warehouse. If it weren't too late. Chances were that someone had forestalled him by removing all traces of the purpose for which the warehouse had been used.

He ducked down out of sight as the truck turned and avoided the searching fingers of the lights as they crept through the weeds. Then the truck was gone and it was dark again.

Too late. He'd never catch up with the truck now. He examined the door. This time it had been carefully locked. He took the screwdriver and set to work to remove the hinges.

Carefully he lifted the door aside, flashed on his light and began a slow search of the first floor. As he had anticipated, the crates and boxes were gone. At the end of a half hour he had gone over every foot of space. There were no signs of occupancy except in the small office in which Gillian had been imprisoned.

Here, on the floor, there were excelsior, floor shavings, crumpled paper, two empty boxes. Someone had been in a hurry to remove the evidence. If only, he thought, raging at himself, he hadn't been so stupid! If only he had examined them more closely, looked to see whether there was any indication of their contents.

Upstairs, the warehouse seemed to extend forever, dark cavernous, echoing weirdly with his footsteps. He went at once to the padlocked door he had seen on his first trip. Once more he decided to remove the hinges. He worked quickly.

Footsteps again. Jim flattened, holding his breath. There had been no sound of a motor. Was it the man with the truck who had returned on foot, or was it someone else? In any case, the footstep knew he was there. The door of the hinges would provide warning.

He snatched off his flashlight and stood motionless. In sneakers he moved almost soundlessly. He tried to remember the layout of the second floor, the location of the stairs. There was no place to hide here.

The footsteps below were cautious. He gripped the big chisel and fastened his flashlight to his belt. There was a gleam of light coming up the stairwell. At once he oriented himself and crept noiselessly, careful step by careful step, hoping he could avoid creaking boards.

Then someone began to climb the stairs while he backed away toward the wall. The feet stopped abruptly, then retreated.

The man below was moving fast now, making no attempt to conceal his movements. He walked from end to end of the building. But what was he up to? There was nothing left downstairs. Nothing at all.

There was the sound of paper being crumpled. Then an odd sound as though someone had knocked over a bucket of water. A pungent smell filled the air. Gasoline?

There was a flicker of light. More light. The stairwell glowed as bright as day. A roar of sound.

Fire!
